

George Malindretos

SHORT CV

Associate Professor of Logistics and Supply Chain Management at Harokopio University of Athens, Greece, School of Environment and Applied Economics. He holds a Civil Engineer Degree with specialization in Transport Engineering, National Technical University of Athens, Greece, MSc Logistics and Transportation, Cranfield University, UK and Ph.D. in Business Process Re-engineering, Panteion University of Athens. He has participated in international conferences planning and organization, chaired in workshops, presented a big number of papers in international scientific conferences, while he was awarded with the distinction of 'best paper' in a European Conference in Slovenia (MIC 2011).

With more than 16 years teaching experience, he has published a number of articles in scientific journals on various issues, while in 2015 he edited the book titled 'Markets, Business and Sustainability' (Bentham Publishers, UK), with the participation of distinguished academics from all over the world.

He has participated in projects as consultant or responsible in business plans of introducing Logistics and building-up SCM in retailing and in a number of Greek manufacturing and multinational companies. He has also participated in the Tempus Tacis Training Program of Specialists in Sea Transport Management at OSMU (Odessa National Maritime University, Ukraine) and also in many other European Research Programmes.

He is member of the Hellenic Institute of Logistics Management (representative of European Logistics Association in Greece), Cranfield Logistics Society (CLS), etc.